Precious Sam Shee Burned in Aderation of the Idol.

THIS IS THE NEW WAR IDOL In the penurious policy of nature, with all her rare and precious gifts, the district where climate and soil combine to support the wonderful Sam Shee is very limited, and covers scarce a square mile of the valley of the Silver Moon. Further, the Imperial Government has from ancient times, restricted the cultivation of the plant to the garden of a valley.

market may thus be understood, and when it is known that the aromatic floss from these precious pods is employed in making wicks for lamps that burn eternally before important shrines, its immense sentimental value may be appreciated.

A new god visited Chinatown yesterday and settled upon an altar in the upper loft of 16 Mott street. A consignment of Sam Shee especially imported for the solemn ceremonies of installing this new delty also arrived, and it was this as much, if not considerably more, that led to the gayeties of last night, that leave Chinatown this morning in a dead and alive condition that is woful to behold.

The new god has 3,522 different names, as many as the arrows that Prince Quing launched at the Tartar dragon in his memorable exploit some years before the Christian era. But the name which the Occidental tongue can nearest the condental tongue can nearest.

It was heard that the Chinese residents of this neighborhood had a great time over a new joss, and an "Evening World" reporter went to inquire. Although it was well along in the forenoon the control of heard that the Chinese residents though it was well along in the forenoon not a curtain was drawn in Mott street. The temple was located, as noted, on the top of No. 16, and thither the reporter repaired. The stairs were climbed past floors of sealed and silent chambers. No one appeared to ask the wherefore of the intrusion, for a stranger passing through your bedroom or exploring your pastry is an incident of no account in Chinatown. A peep was taken in Low Fat Tuen's restaurant on the third floor, and the tables and floors were still littered with the exhausted revellers of the night before, lying about in the abandoned postures of their fall.

When the temple was reached some interrogation was expected, but here, too, were the silent signs of a high old time spent and gone.

The room was fitted as are all loss.

insense tapers and the feverish odors of an ill-ventilated sleeping-room. The priest lay prome in the doorway of a closet at the side of the shrine too dead to the world to open his eyes when pretty forcibly stirred, while curied beneath the altar like two overfed dogs lay a pair of acolytes who had wearled at the task of feeding the eternal fires.

Without any interruption the reporter sketched the majestic features of Low Plung and the still more rare and sacred lamp of Sam Shee wick. Then he posted off to collect the facts that make this narrative possible.

It appears that the dehirious time, the trail of which was still plain to be seen, was due to the remarkable conjunction of invoices of Sam Shee and a new jost. The former has been explained, but the latter baffles elucidation by one who has spent less than a lifetime in the study of Chinamen.

Gannon then spramy in front of Delahanty, and, striking a puglistic attitude, shouted, "Come on, and I'll land you one of them!" Dehahanty, who is not so heavily built as the prisoner, was not frightened, however, and, drawing his "billy," he made a rush for Oannon. The latter did not await the onset, but turned and ran.

After a race of a few blocks, Delahanty ran Gannon down. A terrible struggle then ensued between them, during which Gannon struck the policeman several times and tore his coat into shreds. Delahanty used his club, and when Policeman Reed arrived it required their united efforts to arrest Gannon and drag him to the police station. There his pedigree was taken and he was taken to court.

IS KERWIN WAVERING?

John Simpson Says the General Will Leave Milholland.

John Simpson, one of the leaders of the Committee of Thirty, made the prediction this morning that Gen. Michael Kerwin, Police Commissioner, who aided and abetted the Milholland movement, would return to the regular fold within forty-eight hours.

"Gen. Kerwin is a Republican who has the interest of his party at heart. He made a misstep, and I know he will be forgiven for it. From what I know of him as a man he will not cause fur-
